Discipline Procedures

1. An effort will be made to reenforce positive behavior and ignore negative behavior when possible.
2. Threatening gestures shall not be used.
3. We will allow each child to express their own feelings about any unacceptable behavior and then in a positive and firm manner, tell the child what is expected of them.
4. Extreme behavior such as kicking, biting, scratching, spitting, throwing objects, and temper tantrums can usually be controlled by giving the child a choice of discontinuing such behavior or being separated from the group for "TIME OUT". Sitting away from the group, but within my sight, for a period of one minute for every year of age.
5. Any discipline that cannot be handled by the above steps will be handled by contacting the parents so that we might be able to control the problem in another mutually acceptable manner.

It is important that we all remain realistic in the expectations of the behavior of each child.

Discipline is a slow, bit by bit, time consuming task of helping children to see the sense in acting in a certain manner.

I, _____, have received in writing the discipline procedures used
